Essential Question

Why did some colonists choose to rebel while others remained loyal to England as the American Revolution began? How do the varied viewpoints of colonists enhance our understanding of the American Revolution?

Summary

Students analyze primary source documents to understand the motives of colonists who supported, opposed, or remained neutral before the American Revolution. They apply this understanding to open-ended scenarios and write from the perspective of a loyalist, patriot, or neutralist.

Snapshot

Engage

Students recall prior knowledge of the Boston Tea Party and discuss different colonists' reactions.

Engage

Display slide 2 with the lesson title. Introduce slides 3–4 to explain the lesson objectives and the essential question students will explore. Show slide 5 and ask students to share what they know about the Boston Tea Party.

Possible Student Responses

Students may recall that in December of 1773, Samuel Adams and members of the Sons of Liberty dressed as Native Americans threw English tea overboard from three British ships docked in Boston Harbor. The Sons of Liberty, led by Samuel Adams, were a group of working-class men who were angered by British-imposed taxes, including the Tea Tax. This protest, known as the Boston Tea Party, was an attempt to show opposition to this tax imposed by King George III and the British Parliament.

After students have shared the basic facts about the Boston Tea Party, display slide 6 and prompt them to think about what might have happened the day after the event. Give students a moment to think about their answers and have them share this answer with a partner using the Think, Pair, Share strategy. Once partners have discussed their thoughts, ask for volunteer pairs to share their answers with the class.

Possible Student Responses

- Some colonists supported the Boston Tea Party because they were angry about British acts and taxes.
- Other colonists, who still considered themselves loyal British citizens, opposed the Boston Tea Party and saw it as unlawful.
- Many colonists feared that this protest would lead to stricter British laws or even military action against them.
- Some colonists were indifferent or unaware of the event, particularly those outside Massachusetts.

Display slide 7. While they are still in pairs, ask students to discuss these different reactions and then have them work together to match vocabulary terms to their definitions. Once students finish, call on volunteers to share their answers and reasoning. Display slide 8 to confirm the correct answers.

Explore

Arrange students into groups of three and distribute Document Set 1, 2, or 3 to each group. Provide each student with a SOAPS Note Organizer. Display slide 9 and explain that students will use the jigsaw strategy with each student in the group reading one document from their set and filling out the SOAPS organizer.

After completing the organizer, students share their document and notes with their group. This discussion will help students collectively understand the varying perspectives represented in their assigned documents.

40 minutes

Explain

Teacher's Note: Lesson Organization

If teaching this lesson over multiple days, consider beginning the next day with this activity. Have students rejoin their group of three from the previous activity. Reviewing the terms on slide 7 and having students revisit their SOAPS organizers with their group may be helpful.

Display slide 10. Now that students have reviewed all documents in their group's set, explain that each document set contains one primary source from a loyalist, a neutralist, and a patriot. Ask students to identify the perspective of the document they read. If students are undecided, allow them to discuss with their group.

Reassign students into new groups based on their document's stance, creating separate groups for loyalists, neutralists, and patriots. Depending on class size, multiple groups of each perspective may form. Instruct students to share and discuss their SOAPS information within their new group. Allow 10-15 minutes for this discussion.

Display slide 11. Pass out poster paper or chart tablets and markers to each group. Instruct each group to create a poster summarizing their assigned perspective. Groups may be as creative as they wish but should answer all the questions on slide 11. Allow 15-20 minutes for groups to create their posters, then display them around the room, clustering those with the same colonist perspectives together.

Call on each group to present their poster and explain the perspective they represented.

20 minutes

Extend

Teacher's Note: Preparation

The Decision Time handout contains 8 colonist scenarios, with each page containing two scenarios. Before class, print enough copies of this handout so each pair of students receives one scenario, then cut the pages into half sheets. The Decision Time Sample Answers handout contains possible answers for each scenario and is for teacher reference.

Pair students with a new partner and pass out one scenario from the Decision Time handout to each pair. Display slide 12. Ask pairs to analyze their assigned scenario and determine if their colonist would be a loyalist, patriot, or neutral, based on the provided information. Remind students to explain their reasoning for each decision.

Invite pairs to share their reasoning for each scenario, starting with the scenario of Colonist A. Each scenario is also displayed on slides 13 through 20. Some pairs may have different answers for the same scenario, so encourage a discussion of different perspectives.

Evaluate

Pass out the RAFT Organizer handout to each student. Introduce the RAFT strategy and ask students to choose one scenario from the RAFT options. Instruct students to write from the perspective of a loyalist, patriot, or neutralist, using the information and insights they have gained in the lesson.
