

HISTORICAL MINGLE CARDS

You are Lord Castlereagh, Foreign Minister of Great Britain.

I desired a balance of power, so I advocated that Russia and France did not gain large amounts of territory. I was a member of the Conservative Order. I supported the creation of buffer states around France and worked to see that France's borders went back to the 1790s to check France's power. I supported giving Poland to Russia, in hopes of stopping Russia's ambitions of acquiring land. I supported giving more land to Prussia, resulting in a strengthening of its power. I was moderately successful at balancing power in Europe, but Prussia continued to rise in power, and Russia continued to gain land, so my goal was not fully achieved.

You are Charles-Maurice de Talleyrand, Foreign Minister of France.

I desired for France to not be seen as a defeated country, but an historical major power at the peace negotiations. I worked to include France in major discussions and to encourage the other countries to be lenient toward France. I desired to have the "legitimate" monarch, Louis XVIII, placed on the French throne after the overthrow of Napoleon, and I was successful as the representatives agreed to place the rightful Bourbon Monarch on the French throne.

You are Klemens von Metternich, Foreign Minister of Austria.

I led the Conservative Order and wanted to see the previous monarchs who had been dethroned by Napoleon put back in charge because I favored traditional leaders and disliked the possibility of letting ordinary people vote. I also supported the creation of buffer states around France to keep France from becoming too powerful. I felt that a strong monarch in France would stop Russia from attempting to expand. I also worked to ensure that Russia was not given too much land, as I didn't want Russia to become too powerful. I wanted to prevent future revolutions like the one in France, so I disliked ideas of nationalism and liberty.

You are Tsar Alexander I, leader of Russia.

I viewed Russia as a great power that defeated Napoleon. I wanted Russia to gain land and eventually gain Poland under Russian control. I also wanted to ensure Russia did not lose control of Finland. I supported the return of a monarch to France, and I did not like the ideas of liberty. Unfortunately, people believed I did not have many friends. When Russia began to rise to power, other countries began to distrust me.

Sources

College Sidekick. (n.d.). Boundless world history study. <https://www.collegesidekick.com/study-guides/boundless-worldhistory>

Dawe, G. (1825). Portrait of the emperor of Russia Alexander I of Russia [Painting]. Wikimedia Commons.
https://commons.wikimedia.org/wiki/File:Alexander_I_of_Russia_by_G.Dawe_\(1825,_Russian_museum\).jpg.jpg)

Lawrence, T. (1815). Clemens Lothar Wenzel, Prince Metternich (1773–1859) [Painting]. Wikimedia Commons.
https://commons.wikimedia.org/wiki/File:Prince_Metternich_by_Lawrence.jpeg

Lawrence, T. (1814). Robert Stewart, Viscount Castlereagh, 2nd Marquess of Londonderry, KG, GCH, MP (1769–1822) [Painting]. Wikimedia Commons.
https://commons.wikimedia.org/wiki/File:Thomas_Lawrence_\(1769-1830\)_and_studio_-_Robert_Stewart_\(1769%E2%80%931822\),_Viscount_Castlereagh,_Later_2nd_Marquess_of_Londonderry,_KG,_GCH,_FRS,_PC,_MP_-_1220975_-_National_Trust.jpg_and_studio_-_Robert_Stewart_(1769%E2%80%931822),_Viscount_Castlereagh,_Later_2nd_Marquess_of_Londonderry,_KG,_GCH,_FRS,_PC,_MP_-_1220975_-_National_Trust.jpg)

Gérard, F. (1808). Charles Maurice de Talleyrand Périgord (1754–1838), Prince de Bénévent [Painting]. Wikimedia Commons.
https://commons.wikimedia.org/wiki/File:Charles_Maurice_de_Talleyrand_P%C3%A9rigord_\(1754%E2%80%931838\),_Prince_de_B%C3%A9n%C3%A9vent_MET_DP277234.jpg,_Prince_de_B%C3%A9n%C3%A9vent_MET_DP277234.jpg)

