INSTRUCTIONAL STRATEGIES

Academic Action News

This strategy promotes critical thinking for reflection purposes via news segments. Academic Action News allows students to format a presentation and share how the presented material is applicable for the individual student, the class, and other classes.

ACADEMIC ACTION NEWS

Summary

Academic Action News is a collaborative strategy that encourages students to process and present their understanding of course content by taking on the roles of a newscast team. Students work in small groups of 4–6, with each student assuming a specific role modeled after real-world newscasters to present their understanding of a topic. This strategy promotes synthesis of information, peer teaching, creativity, and public speaking.

Procedure

1. Divide the students into groups of 4-6 individuals.

2. Provide each group a topic to create a presentation on.

3. Each student in the group will fulfill a role as a newscaster.

   - One or two individuals will act as the main news anchors, giving the introduction and conclusion. The main news anchors will introduce the newscast topic, provide a thesis statement for their newscast, and note a preview of the upcoming topics. In the conclusion, they'll summarize the newscast, restate their thesis, and end with a memorable close.

   - One student will act as the weather specialist. Their role is to report on the class climate on the topic. What made sense? What didn't make sense? How are students feeling about the material? (This isn't a critique of the teacher—it's measuring how the class feels about the MATERIAL).

   - One student will act as the sports reporter. Their role is to report how students can apply the material they learned in their everyday lives. (How does this material matter?)

   - One student will act as the local news specialist. Their role is to report how students can apply the material they learned in the class they are currently in. (How will you use this material as you continue in this class?)

   - Finally, one student will act as the international news specialist. Their role is to report how students can use this material in other classes. (How will you use this material in other classes?)

4. Provide students a copy of the attached planning documents. Give students plenty of time to do their research and plan their segments.

5. Try to keep newscasts (i.e., entire presentation) between 7-10 minutes.
